

Frasier Residents Celebrate Colorado Pollinator Month with “Come Pull a Weed” Event

BOULDER, Colo. (June 25, 2025) – Frasier, a nonprofit senior living community in Boulder, celebrated Colorado Pollinator Month with a hands-on gardening event at its resident-led pollinator garden. The celebration, affectionately themed “Come Pull a Weed,” invited residents, staff, community members, and Colorado’s First Gentleman Marlon Reis to join in gardening activities and learn about native pollinators.

Frasier’s “Pollinator Pals,” a resident stewardship group, led the event, sharing information about bees, butterflies, and other pollinators that the garden supports. The pollinator garden is part of the citywide Boulder Pollinator Garden Project, which promotes biodiversity and provides habitat for native pollinators.

The event highlighted Frasier’s commitment to sustainability, community engagement, and vibrant aging. Participants spent the morning tending the garden, connecting with neighbors, and celebrating the role of pollinators in the local ecosystem.

About Frasier and Its Pollinator Garden

Frasier is a nonprofit Life Plan community in Boulder, Colorado, serving older adults since 1960. The community offers independent living and a full continuum of care, while fostering opportunities for residents to engage with each other and the broader community.

The Pollinator Pals are a dedicated group of residents who maintain Frasier’s pollinator garden, an official site in Boulder’s Pollinator Garden Project. The garden provides habitat for bees, butterflies, and other native pollinators while fostering connection and purpose among residents and volunteers.
